Climate change and displacement in the indigenous region of Gunayala, Panama with Carlos Arenas, Consultant at Displacement Solutions

Displacement Solutions, an international organization involved in climate migration, visited Panama to investigate the how rising sea levels are displacing indigenous island communities and make recommendations for relocation. UW-Madison alumnus Carlos Arenas has spent more than 20 years working on human rights issues and served as executive director of Working Capital for Community Needs in Madison, Wis. To learn more, visit www.displacementsolutions.org.