The Politics of Being Human:
Can professions enable societies to humanize and heal themselves?

with Frank Kronenberg, co-founder, Occupational Therapists Without Borders, and an Interprofessional Global Health Panel

Occupational therapist Frank Kronenberg from South Africa will ask his audience to consider “How are we doing together?” as humans and as health professionals. He will explore how health professionals can make themselves available in new ways to promote health and well-being in organizations, communities and societies. He explores core concepts of human occupation and health through Aristotle’s concept of Phronesis, or practical knowledge, and the African philosophy of Ubuntu, or critical humanism.

A panel of UW-Madison scholars will respond to Kronenberg’s talk, and an audience discussion will follow.

To learn more, visit ghi.wisc.edu.