We are becoming a more urban people, and Polish–Australian architect Mark Krawczynski has helped design a building that will generate enough power to meet more than its own needs. Channeling wind, solar, rain and geothermal energy, the design will change how we think about buildings and contribute to health for millions, Krawczynski says.

Learn more at ghi.wisc.edu.

Sponsors:
- COWS
- Global Health Institute
- Nelson Institute for Environmental Studies
- Office of Sustainability