#MUGH6.0

THE SIXTH ANNUAL MIDWEST UNIVERSITIES FOR GLOBAL HEALTH (MUGH) conference brings together faculty, staff, and students representing 20 academic institutions from across the Midwest to network, learn, and share best practices. The group was organized to advance and celebrate the strength of global health programs and projects in the nation's heartland. MUGH provides a way to connect with colleagues, to share global health initiatives and impact, and to better address the immediate and existential challenges facing people, ecosystems and the planet.

YOUR HOST:

THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON Global Health Institute (GHI) works at the intersection of health, equity, and sustainability. Our work is grounded in a global health ethic that recognizes that the health of humans, animals, and the planet's ecosystems are inextricably linked. It recognizes that widening health disparities, emerging diseases, gender inequities, a changing climate, and land, water and air pollution threaten all life. It is a call to action to find practical solutions to ensure health for communities of all kinds, their places and future generations.

THE UW-MADISON GLOBAL HEALTH INSTITUTE is an idea born in Wisconsin—and it is a global manifestation of the Wisconsin Idea.
